In September 1939, Hitler’s forces invaded Poland, where Reszelbach’s father lived with his former wife and children. On his way to get a haircut for Rosh Hashanah, Nazis abducted him. He would go on to survive four concentration camps and meet Reszelbach’s mother at a displaced persons facility after the war in 1945. His mother survived by hiding in a Catholic neighbor’s home in Poland.

Meet Dr. William Reszelbach and hear him discuss what it was like growing up with parents who were Holocaust survivors. Learn how they lived through the war and adjusted to life in the U.S.
